

...pointed were William W. Aston
...from Dallas and Glenn Biggs of

Execution reports proved to be false

Associated Press
BEIRUT, Lebanon — An anonymous caller said Islamic extremists planned to kill half-dozen American hostages Thursday, while a caller claimed they had the lead. However, no captives were to be freed by firing squad behind direct negotiations the United States had made "a dead end," the caller said in a call to a news agency. Washington, however, a House official said "there are no hostages" in the Lebanon case had not broken.

President Ronald Reagan said the death threat, "Evidence here is no substantiated at all." The calls could not be identified, it was impossible to determine whether they were a macabre hoax or part of a war being waged by the shadowy Shiite Moslem faction trying to pressure Washington into making a deal.

Six Americans are missing in Lebanon, and Islamic Jihad claimed Oct. 1 it killed one of them, diplomat William Buckley, 57. However, no body was found.

The other American captives are Peter Kilburn, 60, an American University of Beirut librarian; the Rev. Lawrence Jenco, 50, a Roman Catholic priest; Terry Anderson, 38, chief Middle East correspondent for the Associated Press; David Jacobsen, director of the American University Hospital; and Thomas Sutherland the university's dean of agriculture.

In other Lebanon abduction cases, calls reporting supposed "executions" were false.

...losion kills 2

...specific word changes necessary and present them at the 1986 BGCT meeting in El Paso.

City has poor self-image

By DALE PITTMAN

Lariat Staff Writer

Reluctance by past city governments to plan for the future led Waco City Councilwoman LaNelle McNamara to say recently that Waco has a poor self-image, she said recently.

"Waco, by some of its past actions, seems to have a poor self-image," McNamara said. "It seems to act as a poor community, as a poor person would act."

"One of the characteristics of poor people is they don't plan for the future," McNamara, a licensed psychologist, said. "This is natural since the poor have never had much success meeting their goals. They really don't know what is going to happen to them five or 10 years from now, so they simply react to the pressures at hand."

McNamara said the city has had a tendency to react to problems as they arise instead of designing and executing a comprehensive growth plan.

"I don't want anyone to think that Waco is a poor place," McNamara said. "There are lots of rich people (in Waco), but when it comes to making community decisions, they act like a poor community."

"Waco is reluctant to make a plan for the far distant future and work towards that plan and have confidence that in 20 years they will accomplish all of the things they set out to accomplish," she said. "Instead, they act from day to day."

Lack of a long-term plan is one factor that led to the deterioration of downtown Waco, McNamara said. When a past city government located Waco's industrial park on the west side of town, it exaggerated growth in that direction and away from downtown.

"For downtown to survive it can't be on the east side of town," McNamara said. "It's got to be central. Everything we do to stimulate growth on the west side of town hurts

To catch a pig

TEST PREPARATION SPECIALISTS SINCE 1958
MILMAN EDUCATIONAL CENTER LTD.
SPEED HEARING

SEE RESOLUTION

White blames Reagan laws for layoffs

The Associated Press
AUSTIN — Pledging the